

Table of Contents

Acknowledgments	vii
Editor's Introduction	ix
Prologue: Hope and History	1
Part One: Decadence
1. Decadence Past and Present	11
2. Decadence and the Machine	21
3. The Perception of Decadence	37
Part Two: Equality
4. A Few Unequal and Preliminary Thoughts	63
5. Equality in the New Testament	71
6. The New Natural Law and the Problem of Equality	85
7. Liberty and Equality as Absolutes	99
Part Three: Historiography
8. History: A Revolutionary or Conservative Discipline?	113
9. A Fresh Start: American History and Political Order	127
10. Freedom and the Crisis in Historiography	137
11. The United States as a "Revolutionary Society"	151
Part Four: Intellectual History
12. Socialism	167
13. The Use and Abuse of Myth	175

14. Modernity, Science, and Rationality	187
15. The Inevitability of Tradition	195
16. Marxism and Modernity	201
Part Five: Politics
17. Political Idealism and Political Reality	211
18. What Is the Purpose of Politics?	221
19. Why I Am a Republican and a Conservative	231
Part Six: Conservatism
20. How Does the Past Become the Future?	239
21. The Conservative Search for Identity	247
22. Gnostics, Romantics, and Conservatives	263
23. Elites, Community, and the Truth: A Little Story	277
Part Seven: Polemics
24. Alienation and Relevance	285
25. The Second Spring of American Conservatism	293
26. Why I Too Am Not a Neoconservative	303
Part Eight: Tributes
27. Joseph Ward Swain	311
28. Russell Kirk	317
29. Henry Regnery	321
Notes	327
Sources	341
Index	345