PROGRAM OVERVIEW

Over six decades ago, Friedrich Hayek awakened the conservative impulse in America with the publication of The Road to Serfdom. At a time when America was seriously questioning whether our free institutions would survive the twin calamities of depression and world war, Hayek delivered what would become the definitive defense of a free market society based on competition and the rule of law. The 2005 North Carolina Leadership Conference provides an opportunity to reengage with Hayek's critique of collectivism, the role of state intervention, the meaning of equality, the cultivation of private initiative, and the prospects for the future of liberty and order.

Join North Carolina's best and brightest students and faculty for this day-long leadership conference. Seating is limited. The first 200 registrants are admitted free of charge. Register online at www.isi.org or contact Kelly Hanlon at NC2005@isi.org or 800-526-7022 for more information.
